

Honoring those who move our community forward

The Missourian is hosting the second annual Progress Awards. The program is designed to lift up people who are engaged in our community who may not be recognized for their contributions otherwise.

We want to recognize the people and organizations that help make Columbia a great place to live, work and learn.

Award categories include civic engagement, sustainability, philanthropy and more — there's a category for everyone in our community. (See reverse side for category descriptions and examples.)

HOW TO NOMINATE

All nominations must be submitted online. You may nominate as many people (or organizations) as you like for as many categories as you like. The last day to submit nominations is Oct. 26. Access the nomination form at columbiamissourian.com/progress

AWARD SELECTION

The editors of the Missourian and the 2017 winners will select the 2018 winners based solely on the nominations received from the public. All nominees will be honored at the Progress Awards ceremony on Tuesday, Dec. 4.

AWARD CATEGORIES

- Progress in Education: Recognizes an individual educator, administrator or support staff member or a program at an educational institution who has made an impact on his/her/their school or community at large through innovative approaches to teaching, programs, community outreach or mentorship.
- Progress in Health Care: Recognizes a health care provider who has made an impact in Columbia by delivering high quality and innovative care, supporting public health through outreach and education, and modeling responsible health practices and ethics.
- Progress in Social Justice: Recognizes a community member or program that has made an impact in advancing the values of equity, diversity and inclusion in Columbia.
- Progress in the Arts: Recognizes a community member who has made an impact in Columbia by advancing the role of art and artists in Columbia. The arts can include music, theater, poetry, prose, paint, photography, sculpture and any other creative form.
- Progress in Sustainability: Recognizes a community member who has made an impact on environmental sustainability through innovative practices, education and continuous improvement.
- Progress in Entrepreneurship: Recognizes a business owner or business owners who have successfully launched a startup or small business based in Columbia for at least a year. The recipient ought to reflect a commitment to their communities and support fellow entrepreneurs.
- Progress in Philanthropy: Recognizes an individual or group that has modeled the way for what it means to give back to those most in need in our communities through fundraising and inspiring leadership to others in doing so.
- Progress in Civic Engagement: Recognizes an individual who holds an elected, appointed or staff position in government who demonstrates a commitment to being engaged with citizens and upholds the ideals of open, fair and transparent local government.
- The Sherman Brown Award: Recognizes a community member who, like its namesake, serves his or her neighbors, patrons or customers with the highest esteem and commitment to treating each and every person "like gold."
- Corporate Citizenship: Recognizes a firm with a presence in Columbia that demonstrates a commitment to community service and involvement by supporting efforts in education, the arts, sustainability, social justice or entrepreneurship.

SUBMIT A NOMINATION TODAY!

You may nominate as many people (or organizations) as you like for as many categories as you like. The last day to submit nominations is Oct. 26. Access the nomination form directly at columbiamissourian.com/progress

MISSOURIAN

573.882.5700 221 S. Eighth St., Columbia
columbiamissourian.com

